Replace aging printers - new printers are more energy efficient!
Choose ENERGY STAR multifunction devices (MFDs) that do the work of several machines. In addition to saving space and materials, these All-in-Ones save energy compared to several products working in parallel. Select printers or multifunction products that offer two-sided printing to reduce paper and energy usage. Networking printers and copiers will decrease their idle time and provide for more cost-effective use of the equipment.

Server Consolidation
Consolidation can help eliminate infrastructure sprawl by employing virtualization technologies. As you try and extract maximum business value from your IT investment, consolidating client workloads onto servers has never made more sense. Consolidating to a virtual infrastructure can increase typical server utilization rates from 5-15 percent to over 70 percent, thus helping to improve your ROI, reduce energy consumption and lower cooling costs.
