Responsibility

The Verizon Wireless HopeLine® program puts wireless products and services to work to benefit the community. HopeLine focuses on the prevention of domestic violence and increasing community awareness of this national epidemic.

The HopeLine phone recycling program is the cornerstone of the company's philanthropic effort, assisting victims of domestic violence and the non-profit agencies that serve them.

How HopeLine Gives Back

Donating Wireless Phones and Service
Phones donated to HopeLine are refurbished and resold with proceeds directed to HopeLine, or if they are no longer usable, recycled in an environmentally safe way. With the funds raised from the donated phones, Verizon Wireless purchases wireless phones, then donates them complete with airtime and other features, to victims through partnerships with national domestic violence advocacy organizations or local government and law enforcement agencies. The phones can serve as a vital link to emergency or support services in times of crisis or simply as a private, safe connection to employers, family and friends.

Grants
Verizon Wireless also provides financial grants to non-profit organizations that support victims of domestic violence or provide education in the community. To qualify for financial grants, domestic violence advocacy organizations can contact Verizon Wireless at www.verizonwireless.com/hopeline.

#HOPE
#HOPE is another resource from Verizon Wireless. By dialing #HOPE from any Verizon Wireless phone, anywhere in the country, victims will have an immediate connection to the National Domestic Violence Hotline, and they can take another step towards safety and independence.

Workplace Programs
Violence is not confined to victims’ homes; harassment and violence can occur in the workplace as well. Domestic violence affects victims’ productivity and performance on the job: 37 percent of women who experienced domestic violence reported that the abuse had an impact on their work performance in the form of lateness and missed work and affected their ability to keep a job or obtain career promotions.

In response to workplace issues associated with Domestic Violence, Verizon Wireless has conducted Workplace Safety Programs with employees and sponsored a national poster campaign as part of its involvement in the Corporate Citizenship Initiative (CCI) to workplace response and raise awareness of domestic violence.
